ABSTRACT

This extensive bibliography of middle childhood education is intended to help educators and education agencies improve junior high school education. Section 1 of the bibliography is a comprehensive list of relevant materials. Section 2 is a selected bibliography used as reference materials by the West Virginia Board of Education in developing "A Programmatic Definition for Middle Schools in West Virginia." The items in section 2 are categorized under 13 topics: rationale, needs assessment, instruction, staff, management, evaluation, facilities, budget, learner, organization, curriculum, communication, and philosophy and goals. Both bibliographies contain six types of resources, including books; articles; pamphlets and booklets; ERIC documents; papers, theses, dissertations, and reports; and newspaper articles, bulletins, and newsletters. INTRODUCTION

The State Education Agency (SEA) is responsible for the quality of the educational system in West Virginia. It is, therefore, necessary for the SEA to provide program guidelines and standards for the continual implementation, management, and evaluation of education programs. On April 1, 1977 the West Virginia Board of Education adopted A Programmatic Definition for Middle Schools in West Virginia. This represented an initial step in the direction of the establishment of program guidelines for middle childhood education.

In order to facilitate the implementation of guidelines and standards, the West Virginia Department of Education also recognizes the responsibility for providing resources to other educational agencies in the State. This document, A Comprehensive Middle School Bibliography, is intended to provide this assistance.

The material presented in this publication is an extensive bibliography of middle childhood education. Therefore, the document should be equally valuable to educators as they strive for the improvement of junior high school educational programs.

Much of the information in this document was used as reference materials in the development of A Programmatic Definition for Middle Schools in West Virginia. As standards and systems of classification are developed in middle childhood education, it is hoped that this document will be used by educators in formulating programmatic decisions for middle childhood learners.

SECTION I
